

Diploma in Music Performance

UQ's Diploma in Music Performance provides excellent opportunities to maintain or develop your interests and skills in music ensemble training during your university studies. It enables you to participate in rehearsals and performances by flagship music ensembles, including the UQ Symphony Orchestra and the UQ Chorale, while completing principal studies in your Bachelor's degree.

Audition is required for membership of all ensembles:

Studying Music at UQ

The School of Music creates leaders in music performance, composition, education and research. Our courses are inspiring and are delivered by nationally and internationally acclaimed music professionals.

The Diploma in Music Performance gives you the opportunity to enhance your practical skills through rehearsals, performances and QPAC concerts.

Through your vigorous and enthusiastic participation in an ensemble, you will develop excellence in rhythmic accuracy and pitch discrimination, acquire a full dynamic range, and develop your musical style and vitality through a variety of rehearsal techniques employed by each ensemble director.

What you study

To complete the Diploma, you will enrol in one large ensemble course each semester for eight semesters.

The Diploma in Music Performance can be combined with all undergraduate degrees except the Bachelor of Music (Honours).
